NATIONALISM MUST BE AWAKENED IN CHINA

Once Patriotism Among the Real Chinese People of China is Aroused, Dr. Sun Believes the Manchus Will Be Turned Out.

Arousing a spirit of nationalism in the empire of China among the Chinese people who are not Manchus, will be the life work of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, the Chinese revolutionist, now in Honolulu. Once this spirit can be awakened in the dormant minds of the conquered Chinese race which has submitted to the Manchu yoke for centuries, Dr. Sun believes that the Chinese nation will rise in its might of four hundred millions of people and overturn the Manchu dynasty forever. It is his hope also that upon this Far East revolution a republic will be erected, for Dr. Sun likens the vast provinces of the Chinese Empire to the States of the American Union, needing only a president to govern all alike.

Dr. Sun made a forcible speech yesterday afternoon in the Chinese theater on Liliha street to a large audience which filled gallery and pit. He was chairman of the meeting and Dr. Sun traced the history of China's Manchu dynasty to the present day and detailed the causes which led to the overthrow by the Manchus of the original or ancient Chinese race in the empire. It was the Chinese people themselves who assisted the Manchus to conquer their own vast empire. History, he believes, will repeat itself shortly, and the Chinese will then rise again to wrest the empire back from the Manchus, driving them out of the empire.

Dr. Sun said there was too much of the spirit of the clan among the Chinese, instead of a spirit of broad nationalism which pervades the Japanese empire.

The Chinese people in ancient times were patriotic. The reason that there was no patriotism today was because the real Chinese race, had no nation they could call their own. Even the name of the empire as now known among the Chinese is not that which designated the vast nation in ancient times.

Dr. Sun referred to the thousand students sent to Japan to be educated by the Chinese government, the majority of whom were of the real Chinese race and the minority were Manchus. The Chinese students have been ill-treated. The Manchus have formed an association among themselves to inform the Imperial officials of acts of the Chinese students which they interpret as being offensive to the Imperial Government. This Manchu students' association also asked that the Chinese students be prevented from entering the universities and military schools. If the Chinese students enter the military schools the Manchus believe they will in time overthrow the Manchu dynasty. The Chinese minister in Japan, Mr. Chow, is loyal to the Manchu government, and Dr. Sun alleges that he is assisting in this movement of the Manchu students. At the first of the present year the Chinese students began to discuss the subject of Chinese nationalism and the minister is alleged to be making efforts to nip the movement.

"We have forgotten what nationalism is," said Dr. Sun. "We know there is an Empire of China, but we have forgotten that the emperor is an outsider. We are men without countries. When we go to foreign lands we are assaulted. The Imperial government does not care for us."

No Strength

Are you easily tired? Do you work a burden? Do you often feel weak and faint? Is your appetite poor? Are you easily discouraged? Then your nerves are weak and your blood impure. Sickness is not far away.

Mr. Frederick Devigne, of Capetown, South Africa, sends his photograph and this letter: "My blood often becomes impure, causing eruptions on the skin, and my general system gets all run down, causing indigestion and great debility. But I take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which quickly brings me out of my troubles. For all those who are debilitated and weakened by the long, hot summers of our country, there is no remedy equal to this grand family medicine."

the sign and badge of Manchu supremacy over you. When the Manchus came into power, they prohibited the people to shave their heads. The disobeying of this order meant decapitation, and so it does to this day. "The Chinese people are very industrious and the Manchus are not. The latter are somewhat like the Hawaiians in this respect."

"Many of us fear that the powers will divide China. If we, the Chinese people, do not assist the powers by fighting their battles, they cannot do it. The existence of our country depends entirely upon our knowledge of nationalism. If all of us know what is meant by nationalism the powers will be unable to partition China."

"The Manchus are no longer respected and are a decadent dynasty. Why should we allow our nation to perish, and why should we perish, we, the real Chinese and original possessors of the great empire."

"The Chinese people and the Manchus can never work in harmony. It will be impossible for the people in the future to advocate a constitutional monarchy. There is no reason why they cannot advocate a republican form of government. A republic is the most appropriate form of government for China. When the masses realize that the present emperor is a foreigner they will naturally seek to overthrow him. The eighteen provinces of China are similar to so many States. Each has its own armed force and is independent of the central government. Each manages its financial and diplomatic affairs. All the wars that have occurred in China have been caused by a struggle to establish a dynasty. In fact, China is now a rudimentary republic. It can be improved by modern political principles and can be formed in time into a perfect republic. The Chinese people at the present day do not know where they stand. Those who have a hazy idea of world politics fear that China will be partitioned by the powers."

"To realize where we stand, to know what is our strength, to utilize it properly is our quest and when it is known, then we can establish ourselves as an independent nation."

NO NEWS OF THE SIBERIA

The Siberia failed to come in yesterday from Yokohama as expected. She was not sighted although those directly concerned as to her arrival kept close watch all day. Hackfeld & Co. expected the vessel to arrive early yesterday morning. She will undoubtedly arrive early this morning, and will probably lose no time in departing for San Francisco. She has 800 tons of freight for Honolulu and a large number of passengers are expected to land here, among them being ladies connected with the navy. Midway Island did not report the vessel and she may have passed too far away or went by in the night. A number of passengers will join here, among them being General and Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, and several officers from the fleet.

WHY THE FRENCH LIVE WELL.

A correspondent of the Daily News calls attention to the difference between the prices of various articles of food in London and Paris, respectively, greatly to the advantage of our own capital. Thus, while bread is 4 1-2d. in Paris, it is 2 1-2d. in London; flour, 4d. in Paris, 2d. in London; sugar, 5d. in Paris, 2 1-2d. in London; beef, 2s. and 1s. 5d.; potatoes, 9d. and 6d.; butter, 11d. and 1s. 4d.; tea, 3s. and 1s. 9d.; coffee, 1s. 11d. and 1s. 6d., and so on.

But with all this it is a well known fact that the French family of humble means fares better than the English family of corresponding circumstances—at any rate, in the great cities. Seeking some explanation of the phenomenon, I bethought myself (writes one of our staff) of calling upon a Frenchman and putting the case before him. Good fortune led me to select a well known clergyman, the Rev. Leon Degremont, B. A., B. D., pastor of the French Protestant Huguenot Church of London, in Soho Square, whose wife and daughter very kindly entered into the subject in his absence. Presently he arrived and took part in the conversation.

In the first place, Mme. Degremont assented to the proposition that the French working classes are better fed in the home than their English fellows, and she agreed that most articles of food are dearer in France than in England. "We are not so rich as you," she said. "We could not afford to pay what is paid here." I reserved my opinion as to the causes of the difference in price, and it occurred to me that probably, owing to recent events, sugar would not always remain in this country at half the price at which it is sold in Paris. Madame remarked, as to meat, that foreign meat was cheaper in England than in France, and added: "But in France we seldom eat foreign meat"—an observation which again gives rise to reflection. "Still," she continued, "the French get better food for less money."

"And how do they do it?" I asked. "Because they know how to cook," was the smiling reply. "They use everything. What remains after a meal is made up into something nice—nothing is wasted."

A vision of what was in former years a common object flitted across my brain—the neat covered van of the Little Sisters of the Poor going about the streets collecting waste food from restaurants and hotels, to be made up into tasty dishes by the religiouses for their old and infirm proteges.

"And what," I inquired, "is the foundation of this domestic system?"

"The pot au feu," answered Madame. "A bone or a bit of meat is put into the pot with vegetables and butter, and in this way soup is made. In the country the people have gardens, and vegetables and a little bread and potatoes make their soup. They would have

TO DECIDE THIS WEEK

Macfarlane and Carter
Will Confer on St.
Louis Fair.

F. W. Macfarlane, Hawaiian Commissioner to St. Louis, has been notified by Secretary Reeves of the World's Fair Commission that the lowest bid obtained on the building for Hawaii was slightly in excess of $10,000, or more than double the cost estimated by local architects. Mr. Macfarlane has cabled to have the specifications changed so as to come within the $5,000 limit. If this is not possible the idea of a Hawaiian exhibit may have to be abandoned. The amount of money to be placed at the disposal of the commissioner will be decided upon at a meeting between Macfarlane and Governor Carter this week. If the amount to be allowed is too little it may be that the proposed exhibition will have to be abandoned unless funds can be raised by private subscription. Secretary Reeves has been informed by cable that without a separate building Hawaii will make no display.

The Pearl Harbor profile map, the fish exhibition and the fruits are practically ready for transportation to St. Louis, while the Hawaiian woods are already in Honolulu ready for polishing. If no display is made there will be a waste in money to the Territory of several thousands of dollars, so it will probably be decided to carry on the plans already made, and make the best possible display with the least expenditure of money.

FIRE GUTS CHINESE STORE

Fire almost totally destroyed the wooden one-story structure at the corner of Wilder Avenue and Keeaumoku street, about 8:30 o'clock last night. The building was formerly occupied by the Washington Mercantile Company, and recently by a Chinese named Yee Kin. The Makiki fire department responded to the alarm and in half an hour had the flames extinguished. The interior, especially the living quarters, were gutted.

Last evening Yee Kin attended a church down town, leaving his wife, San Kyau, otherwise known as Eva, and two children on the premises. The children were playing in the store during the evening, two lamps being used to light the place. Later in the evening all went outside and sat on a bench to wait for the proprietor to return. At this time the fire started, and it is believed that some fabric in close proximity to one of the lamps caught fire. In a moment the interior was a mass of flames. The kitchen and living quarters were completely destroyed. There is a small insurance carried by the proprietor. The building is owned by a Hawaiian named Kalealili.

Softening effect of wealth: "We used to think she was a lazy girl." "Yes; that was when she was poor." "How about it now?" "Why, now that she is rich, we merely note the evidence of lassitude and ennui."—Chicago Post.

meat only on a Sunday. In Paris the working people would eat more meat."

"The French would not boil vegetables in water," remarked the young lady, "as the English do; they regard them more as being food in themselves than is the case here."

The pot au feu, with its vegetable contents, all going to make savory soup, brought back to my recollection an Erckmann-chatrain romance read long ago, where the soldiers at the bivouac produce the things they have collected on the march and consign them to the pot. One veteran had a turnip or two, another a carrot or an onion, another contributed bread, a recruit had nothing. "Les anciens sont toujours les anciens," exclaims an old campaigner with a wink.

"If you cook well you will waste nothing," Madame observed.

This led me to say that I thought waste for its own sake was an English characteristic, and that an English domestic servant was not unlikely to regard her mistress as mean if she interfered to prevent waste. But it did not appear that the French mistress would allow waste or that the French servant would depise her on that account. Both the ladies agreed to this view, Madame saying that the German housewife was like the French one in not recognizing waste. She then said that French wives had so many ways of cooking food that meals were not always the same, as was commonly the case in England.

"Eggs, for instance," said the young lady, with a laugh. "How many ways have we of cooking eggs, I wonder? I don't know, but I should say scores."

Madame suggested that it would be a good thing to employ French women to teach the English working women to cook. I thought the idea was not a bad one in itself, but again ventured the opinion that there was an incurable tendency to wastefulness in the English character. At the same time I pointed out what was being done in connection with the school system to teach girls to cook.—London Daily News.

A RELIC OF NERO.

The Italian government has undertaken excavations on the site of the Campus Martius, and has discovered remains and foundations of the monument erected by the Roman senate 13 B. C., under the consulship of Nero and Quintilius in honor of the Emperor Augustus after his victories in Spain and Gaul. The remains now discovered, together with those collected in 1850, and preserved in museums, are sufficient to allow of the reconstruction of the monument, which is symbolic of peace, and it is hoped to complete the work on the occasion of the czar's visit.

The late Gustav von Moser, the successful German author of comedies, whose name is best remembered in this country in connection with "The Private Secretary," used to show his friends a little crystal urn in which he ordained that his ashes were to rest after his cremation. "From every one of the many laurel wreaths showered on him after the premiere of a new success," so the story goes, "he used to pluck a single leaf, burn it, and lay its ashes in the urn. 'And so, you see,' he was wont to say with his sunny smile, 'one of these days I shall really be resting on my laurels.' And so it came about, for his whimsical request was scrupulously observed."
